Incumbent has not yet filed

Lee Koubek and Bruce Clark want to serve on the Gothenburg City Council.

Both filed this past week for the east-ward council seat occupied by Tim Strauser.

Strauser has not indicated whether he plans to re-seek the position.

A west-ward council seat, occupied by Jeff Whiting, is also open and is the seat of mayor Joyce Hudson.

Incumbents have until Feb. 18 to file for office while challengers must meet a March 3 deadline.

District 20 school board

Two incumbents, Nate Wyatt and Jon Hudson, have filed to retain their seats on the District 20 board and Devin Brundage has indicated his desire for one of the three seats open.

Scott France is also up for re-election.

Hospital board

Two seats are open on the Gothenburg Memorial Hospital board and no one has yet filed.

Larry Gill and Ryan O'Hare now occupy those seats.

Airport Authority

Both incumbent Roger Tederman and new appointee Lori Hoesel have both indicated their desire to retain two seats open on the Gothenburg Airport Authority board.

Dawson County offices

Shawn Boyd of Gothenburg is challenging incumbent Mark Streit for Dawson County surveyor.

Incumbents who have filed for re-election to county offices include county clerk Karla Zlatkovsky, sheriff Gary Reiber, treasurer Sharon Wood, surveyor Mark Streit and assessor John Moore.

Two Lexington women, Dian Lauby and Debra Stuchlik, are running for register of deeds.

Three are vying for clerk of the district court and include Becky Boryca of Cozad and Maria Reutlinger-Maravilla and Jackie Rowan, both of Lexington.

Two have indicated their desire to continue serve as county commissioners—Bill Stewart, who represents District 2 and District 3 representative Dennis Rickertsen. Both are from Lexington.

Two seats also remain open on the county weed board.

County races are partisan and all who have filed are Republicans.

Nebraska Legislature

Matt Williams of Gothenburg has filed for the 36th District legislative seat and so far is running unopposed.
