A 2.1% increase in the village levy for the 2012-13 budget year will mean property owners in Brady will pay a little more in taxes the coming year.

Village trustees approved the budget during their regular monthly meeting on Sept. 12.

With an increase in expenditures of more than $72,000, the village raised the levy just over one cent.

Chairman Jeff Miller said that will mean a tax increase of about $8 per $100,000 of valuation for the year.

The bulk of the upward changes in the budget come from mandated repairs to the sewer lagoon.
