

Holiday full of water fights, 'grandma,' more WATER FIGHT

Written by Elizabeth Barrett

Thursday, 11 July 2013 13:32 - Last Updated Thursday, 11 July 2013 13:39

Each year, during Jeffrey Lake's annual Fourth of July boat parade, water fights between boaters and between those on water and on land seem to become more fierce.

Last Thursday was no different. Above, a craft with adults and kids manned with pumps that draw water out of the lake doused anyone and anything that came close. Pictured is a battle between occupants on the craft named "Cousin Eddy" and a pontoon (left) owned by Joe Wahlgren and Ross Ristine. Passengers were drenched, including those heaving water balloons at Cousin Eddy.

