

Daydreaming leads to novels

Written by Deb Egenberger
Friday, 16 November 2012 14:26 -

---

Author says writing serves as a form of therapy for her

Surrounded by the solitude of a secluded hiking trail in the wilderness of the Rocky Mountains, Angela Burke does a lot of daydreaming.

Her mind fills with detailed visions of people, places and circumstances that she carries each evening to her bed, where she transcribes her thoughts into fiction with a computer on her lap and music playing softly in the background.

It's a writing routine Burke has followed for several years and it has led to a pair of published novels and a Christmas novelette.

Burke grew up in Brady, graduating from high school in 1993.

She earned her bachelor's degree in special education and elementary education from the University of Nebraska at Kearney in 1998 and added a master's degree in gifted education from UNK via distance learning in 1998.

She taught for 13 years before deciding to take another path, working now on her associate of occupational studies at Boulder College of Massage Therapy.

"I love holistic healing and Eastern philosophies," she said in an e-mail interview from her home in Boulder, CO. "I am enjoying this new adventure. It's a good fit for me."

Daydreaming leads to novels

Written by Deb Egenberger

Friday, 16 November 2012 14:26 -

---

MORE ABOUT THE AUTHOR

To learn more about Angela Burke, visit her website at www.angela-burkebooks.com

"Lucidity" is available in paperback at Amazon.com. It is also available in e-book format at websites for Solstice Publishing, Amazon.com, Fictionwise, Books on Board, Coffeetime Romance and All Romance E-books.

"Beneath the Maya Moon" is available in paperback as well as e-book format at Amazon.com. Digital formats can be purchased from Fictionwise, Solstice Publishing, All Romance E-books and Coffeetime Romance.

"Backcountry Diaries: A Christmas Rendezvous" is available only in digital format from Amazon.com.